Report: MBTA driver in overpass crash on phone

Obstruction of justice. A T bus driver is accused of being uncooperative.

The MBTA driver who was behind the wheel of a bus that crashed on a Newton overpass Sunday causing the vehicle to hang ominously over the Massachusetts Turnpike is accused of driving dangerously and not cooperating with investigators.

Transit Police obtained a complaint in Newton District Court on Monday charging the unnamed bus operator with obstruction of justice, and she was cited for operating to endanger, speeding and impeded operation, MBTA spokesman Joe Pesaturo said.

An arraignment date has been set for May 27, Pesaturo said. It wasn't immediately clear how the driver allegedly obstructed justice.

The Boston Globe reported that investigators are probing whether the driver used a cellphone before the crash. When asked about that report, Pesaturo said "investigators are looking into all possibilities."

The Route 57 bus crashed at about 7:35 a.m. Sunday, colliding with a guardrail and slamming into chain-link fencing, leaving it partially hanging over the I-90 turnpike.

Of the 10 people onboard, eight were injured during the crash, including the driver. None of the injuries were considered life-threatening.

An MBTA official who was not authorized to speak publicly about the investigation told the Globe that the 43-year-old female driver had a cell phone with her while operating the bus, which violates the T's zero-tolerance policy.

The T prohibits "possession or use of cell phones [and other electronic devices] by bus, subway and trolley operators."

Lawyer: Man thought it was OK to bring guns to BU

Massa
NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

A Marshfield man was under the impression that he was licensed to carry two guns as well as two ammunition-filled magazines into Boston University's commencement ceremony on Sunday, his lawyer said.

Andrea Massa, 28, was instead mistaken and pleaded not guilty on Monday to carrying a firearm on school grounds, disturbing a school, disturbing a public assembly and a civil violation of the restrictions on his license to carry a firearm.

Quoted

"He believed that was the license for all purposes."
Massa's lawyer

A judge ordered him held on $100,000 cash bail.

Massa was licensed to carry firearms for hunting and target practice, but that was it.

"He believed that was the license for all purposes," Massa's lawyer explained in court, adding that there was nothing in the police report to suggest there was "any form of a threat."

Massa attended Sunday's commencement with his wife's family to watch his sister-in-law graduate. When he was about to go through a security checkpoint where he would be scanned by a handheld metal detector, Massa "objected loudly," a prosecutor said, and Massa tried to leave.

"He caused a great security scare at the time," the prosecutor said.

Boston University police stopped Massa and found him in possession of the guns, more than two dozen rounds of ammunition, a tactical flashlight and a utility knife.

Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers head to Fenway

Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers posted a Facebook photo Monday announcing an upcoming performance at Fenway Park. In the photo, the park's scoreboard displayed the band's name, and a caption read, "Coming soon..."

Hundreds of fans weighed in, many of whom were hungry for more details. Some weren't pleased with the location.

Death investigation

Body found in Charles River

A man's body was recovered from the Charles River on Sunday and authorities are trying to identify the man.

The adult body was found in the area of the Community Boating boathouse, not far from the Longfellow Bridge.

The man, who was in his 20s, was not carrying identification. Detectives were working to identify him and contacted local universities, the district attorney's office said.

While the death does not appear suspicious, authorities are still investigating how the man died. METRO

DA: Children's Museum worker had child porn

In court. The longtime employee pleaded not guilty to the charges and is not accused of having any contact with any children.

A longtime employee of the Boston Children's Museum was arrested on child pornography charges after he allegedly left a thumb drive containing illicit images in a co-worker's car.

Paul Fest, 43, of Boston, pleaded not guilty to possession of child pornography, according to the Suffolk district attorney's office. He was arraigned on Friday and released on his own recognizance.

An employee of the museum went to police last month after she found an unfamiliar thumb drive in her car, plugged it into her computer and found images of child pornography. The employee told police she let some coworkers use her car for errands and did not know who the thumb drive belonged to.

During an investigation, authorities received permission from Fest to search his home computer and discovered that it also contained images of child pornography, according to the district attorney's office.

Fest is not accused of any offense involving contact with any child at the museum or elsewhere.

The museum called the allegations "deeply disturbing" and said in a statement that after officials learned of Fest's arrest, they terminated his employment. Fest worked as a facilities coordinator, working on the setup and breakdown of various museum events.

"The single most important priority of Boston Children's Museum is the safety and care of our visitors. This is a very concerning matter, and we are cooperating fully with the Boston police in connection with their ongoing investigation," the museum said.

Attempts to reach Fest at a number listed for him were unsuccessful on Monday.

The Children's Museum has fired the employee.

Police seek suspects after violent attack upon Brighton man

Beating. Police said the man's injuries were life-threatening

A man suffered life-threatening injuries after a violent attack in Brighton over the weekend and police are asking the public's help to find the suspects.

Police were called to the area of 1350 Commonwealth Ave. just after 12:30 a.m. on Saturday for a report of an assault.

When officers arrived they spoke to the victim's friend who said two men jumped and attacked the victim.

The man suffered head trauma and was taken to Brigham & Women's Hospital where his condition worsened. His injuries are now believed to be life threatening, Boston police said.

Police are asking anyone who may have been in the area at the time of the assault or who may have information about it to contact them at 617-343-4470 or text "tip" to 27463 (crime).

Back in business. Keytar Bear spotted playing at Harvard Square T station

The elusive and beloved local street performer known as Keytar Bear was reportedly spotted jamming out at the Harvard Square MBTA station Monday morning after a brief hiatus.

"Keytar Bear sighting on the Red Line this morning," Jean Powers wrote on a We Love Keytar Bear Facebook page around 9:30 a.m. Monday.

Trevor Stricker praised the beat-loving bear's return, saying, "Saw you on the platform this morning in Harvard Square. You rocked out. We Are Family. Keytar Bear = Amaze."

Fund-raisers were recently set up to support the musical bear after he allegedly fell victim to two attacks during his performances.

The bear is back. / BARRY THOMSON

In March, a man allegedly threw a bottle of Snapple at the bear in Faneuil Hall, and last month, the performer allegedly suffered a broken nose after being sucker-punched.

During his performance Monday, Keytar Bear told WBZ NewsRadio "It feels like I'm back home again. I really missed everybody."

The performer also told WBZ that he washed the blood from his bear costume using bleach, and has been doing situps and pushups because "to be able to perform in the street, you have to be in fighting condition."

Back in March, Metro spoke with Keytar Bear during one of his performances outside of Faneuil Hall.

Keytar Bear, whose true identity is unknown, said he would "probably die [stop performing] around April. Before Mother's Day, Keytar Bear will be dead." MORGAN ROUSSEAU

Hacking. US accuses China of cyber spying

A U.S. grand jury has indicted five Chinese military officers on charges of hacking American companies and stealing trade secrets, the toughest action taken by Washington so far to address cyber spying by China.

China denied the charges, saying they were "made up" and would damage trust between the two nations. The Chinese foreign ministry said it would suspend the activities of the Sino-U.S. Internet working group.

The indictments mark the first time the United States has filed charges against specific officials of foreign governments, accusing them of corporate cyber spying. REUTERS

Dropout made bomb threats

A college dropout was arrested Sunday night after admitting to calling in two bomb threats to keep her family from learning she had quit Quinnipiac University, police said on Monday.

Danielle Shea, 22, of Quincy, Massachusetts, made the threats after arriving at the graduation ceremony in a cap and gown with her mother, who did not know she actually had dropped out. She "panicked" when relatives noticed her name was not on the list of graduates, police said.

Shea called in two bomb threats to the Quinnipiac University library so the ceremony would be canceled, police said. Instead the Sunday evening ceremony was delayed 90 minutes and moved a mile to a different campus of the university in the town of Hamden. REUTERS

Webster. Dictionary adds words 'selfie,' 'hashtag,' 'tweep' and 'catfish'

"Selfie," "tweep" and "turducken" were among more than 150 new words and definitions added to the 2014 updated Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, the publishing company said on Monday.

The additions to the U.S. dictionary reflect the growing influence of technology and social networking, the company said.

"So many of these new words show the impact of online connectivity to our lives and livelihoods," Peter Sokolowski, an editor for Merriam-Webster said in a statement. "Tweep, selfie and hashtag refer to the ways we communicate and share as individuals. Words such as crowdfunding, gamification and big data show that the Internet has changed business in profound ways."

One new entry is "steampunk," defined as "science fiction dealing with 19th-century societies dominated by historical or imagined steam-powered technology."

A "selfie" / GETTY IMAGES

And the word "catfish" takes on an added definition, referring to a person who sets up a false social networking profile for deceptive purposes.

"These are words our editors have decided to put in based on usage in the English language," said Merriam-Webster spokeswoman Meghan Lunghi. "They look for widespread, sustained usage — and when they think the usage merits it, they include it."

Deal

AT&T bets on video with $48.5 billion DirecTV bid

AT&T Inc. plans to pay $48.5 billion to buy DirecTV, in the latest sign that the wireless industry and the U.S. television market are set to converge as customers consume more video on their mobile devices.

The deal highlights AT&T's pressing need for fresh avenues of growth beyond the maturing U.S. cellular business, which has become increasingly competitive.

The combination with DirecTV, the No. 1 U.S. satellite TV provider with 20 million customers, would beef up Dallas-based AT&T's packages of cellular, broadband, TV and fixed-line phone services.

For DirecTV, the deal will enable it to offer broadband Internet for the first time to its U.S. customers. REUTERS

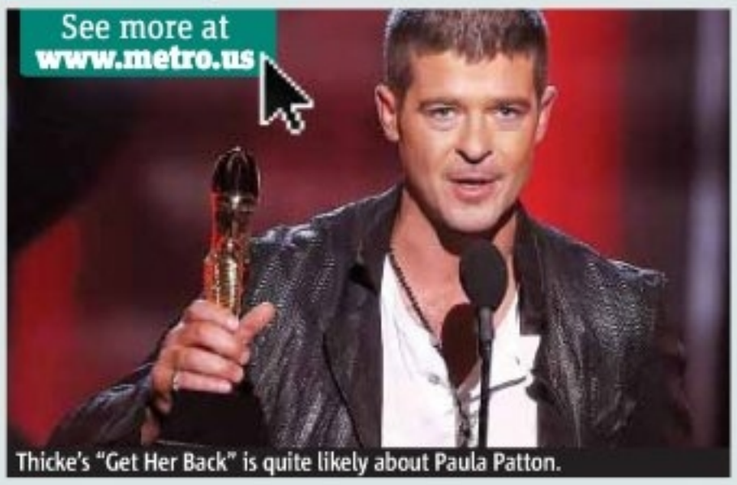
Talking points



Thicke's "Get Her Back" is quite likely about Paula Patton.

Thicke still wants his wife back

Robin Thicke also made a statement while he accepted a Billboard Award for "Blurred Lines." "Most importantly, I'd like to thank my wife for her love and support, and for putting up with me all these years," he said. The same night he performed a new song called "Get Her Back," he also dedicated it to his soon-to-be ex-wife, Paula Patton. But Paula, seriously, can't you just take him back already, so the rest of us don't have to watch him try so hard? It gets pretty tiring.

Timberlake hates Donald Sterling, too

Just like everyone else in the entire world, Justin Timberlake is not very fond of Donald Sterling. He made that very clear Sunday night when he accepted a Top Artist Billboard Award via satellite. "I want to thank everyone on Earth, except Donald Sterling." We want to thank you, Justin, for being awesome!

An SAT question: If 5 Seconds of Summer, pictured here, flash two fingers, will they be 7 Seconds, or will they still be confused with One Direction? / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Who are 5 Seconds of Summer?

By now, everyone knows Kendall Jenner flubbed her lines at the Billboard Music Awards and almost introduced 5 Seconds of Summer as One Direction. But can you blame her? I mean, there are five guys in 1D and only four guys in 5 Seconds! Here's a primer for Kendall, if she's reading: 5 Seconds of Summer, also known as 5SOS, are an Aussie band whose members range in age from 18 to 20. They aren't the singing and dancing type of boy band; these dudes rock out! And the catchy lyrics to their single, "She Looks So Perfect," could be confused with 1D's "What Makes You Beautiful," if it didn't have a refrain about American Apparel underwear.

Singing their way to the top

Interview. "The Voice" finalists share their journeys to the singing competition's big finale.

Finalists Josh Kaufman, Christina Grimmie and Jake Worthington will battle it out to be named the winner on "The Voice." The finale airs tonight at 9 on NBC. / TRAE PATTON, NBC, NBCU PHOTO BANK

The heat is on as "The Voice" comes to a close. We caught up with the last artists standing as they prepared to sing their hearts out for the competition's finale.

Pop singer Christina Grimmie, 21, left her hometown in South Jersey to follow her dream in Los Angeles. She began her music career on YouTube and has more than 2 million subscribers. After getting all four chairs to turn, she joined Team Adam.

"I have been busier than ever before, and my memory has gotten a lot better, too, because we have to memorize a song a week," Grimmie tells us. "[But] the biggest challenge for me is being away from my family. We got to go home for a week after the Blinds, but now we stay here to work on the show."

Josh Kaufman, the family man from Indianapolis, supported his wife and three kids as an SAT prep tutor and musician playing local gigs. The soul singer got all four chairs to turn in the Blinds and originally went with Team Adam, but was later stolen by Usher. Kaufman hopes that winning will allow him to support his family as a full-time musician.

"Usher has a unique coaching style," says Kaufman. "He has me run around the stage before rehearsal, and sometimes he'll have me sing in the mirror. But he's a really good communicator."

Jake Worthington, the country kid from Texas, discovered his passion for music after a football accident. He got three chairs to turn in the Blinds and chose Team Blake.

"I'm not necessarily able to do what I want when I want," says Worthington. "This is work, completely, and not vacation, yet a major blessing and [I'm] thankful for it. I mean, [it's] not every day that you get to sit down and talk with a huge country star like Blake. But whatever he says, on a serious or joking matter, he's always honest with me."

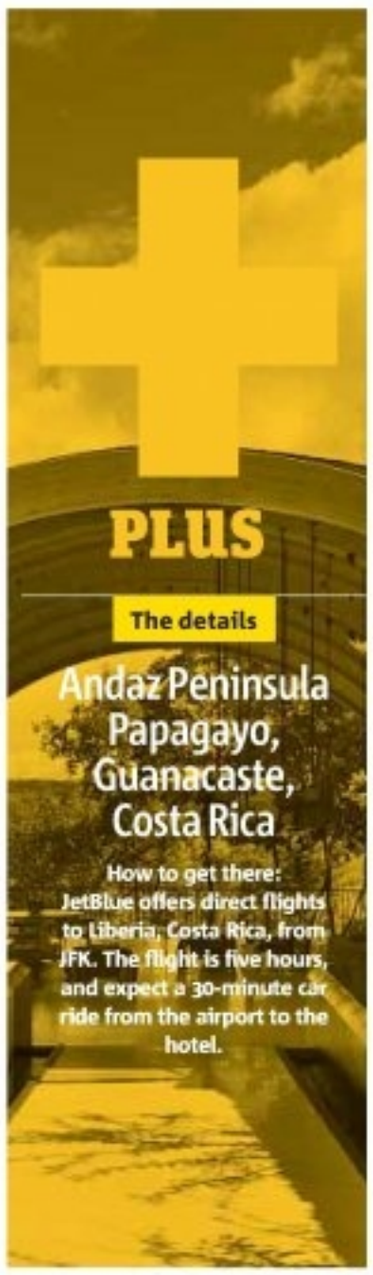
Island life. Take in what Costa Rica has to offer at this chic new resort.



PLUS
The details
Andaz Peninsula Papagayo, Guanacaste, Costa Rica
How to get there: JetBlue offers direct flights to Liberia, Costa Rica, from JFK. The flight is five hours, and expect a 30-minute car ride from the airport to the hotel.

Refined luxury at Costa Rica's Andaz Peninsula Papagayo

The hotel has a private beach, but you'll have to tear yourself away from the pool area first. / ANDAZ

Say the word "resort" to your chicest jet-setting friend, and he or she will probably scoff. And an eye roll might be apt as well — a typical tropical beach resort can bring to mind an ecological eyesore with no direct connection to the paradise or its inhabitants. It's the place where the locals who work there are forced into Hawaiian shirts while they sling frozen drinks to pale visitors noshing on chicken tenders by the pool.

However, there is a sea change occurring in the realm of resorts: Smart hotel chains have realized that their savvy, informed customers are rebelling against homogenous experiences. Enter the Andaz boutique chain, a subsidiary of Hyatt. Andaz works with the community, using local architects, artists and chefs to fashion their hotels and cuisine to make for a more authentic experience, while also retaining the element of luxury and familiarity that Hyatt guests expect. Andaz bears little resemblance to a behemoth resort chain whose lone architectural or stylistic distinction is the fact that it could be anywhere.

The latest Andaz property to enter the travel market is the Andaz Peninsula Papagayo, nestled between the Gulf of Papagayo and the blue waters of Culebra Bay in Guanacaste, Costa Rica. It was designed by Costa Rican architect Ronald Zurcher and is decorated with the work of local artist Salvador Odre.

The resort's private beach offers activities such as top-notch paddle-boarding, kayaking and snorkeling.

The staff at Andaz Peninsula Papagayo take pride in where they work; the beautiful Culebra Bay and its surrounding rainforest are the focal point of the hotel's decor rather than a side note. Everything is open — the rooms, the dining areas, the walkways between rooms and the path to the beach all let you experience paradise. And if it's not open, it's enclosed in clear glass. With the resort's open concept, you can take in monkeys chattering in the background as well as the sweet smell of the rich earth. It was especially nice to see open-air spaces utilized in the hotel's Onda Spa, where trained masseuses work out the kinks while a natural breeze tickles your back.

The same philosophy is applied to the chic, modern hotel rooms, which encourage you to shower with the glass door open so you are one with nature, rather than shut off from it.

When you sit to dine at any of the property's three restaurants, you're encouraged to be outside. Over tapas at Chao Pescao, you can sip on artisanal cocktails on the deck while vines sway above you. At the more fine-dining restaurant, Ostra, the walls are open so you are always looking out to the sea. Casual dining spot Rio Bhongo is surrounded by an infinity pool and bay breezes.

OSTRA
ANDAZ

And instead of the trees being stripped and paved for your walk down to the private beach, you nimbly meander through the jungle. This resort is paradise, experienced.

This is an exciting time to explore meaningful opportunities in education. For one, there is much discussion about lifelong learning; deep, purposeful inquiry; and the relevancy of life experience in formal education. Quality performance and interdisciplinary perspectives throughout the lifespan are therefore essential for meeting the shifting needs of work in a demanding life.

Ethical, caring, discerning decision-making within the context of innovation and ingenuity define the essence of our work in the School of Education. The totality of our programs supports adult learning whether prospective students are domestic or international, whether already teaching and leading in education or aspiring to do so. From teaching English as Second Language (ESL), Math, Science, or Health and Consumer Studies to working with students with Moderate Disabilities and Autism or with young learners in Early Childhood, Elementary, or Early Education and Care, we have programs and faculty to assist. Our programs are also tailored to those interested in educational leadership or who simply wish to deepen individual, personal knowledge through our Interdisciplinary Studies, Multidisciplinary, Social Justice, or doctoral programs.

At Cambridge, we are passionate about what we do and have the perseverance to help you achieve your goals. What makes us unique is our combined focus on adult education, teaching, and learning. Academic excellence in education is at the core of who we are. So come and experience endless possibilities of learning in an exciting, viable community of adult learners. We offer competitive, affordable education and people committed to your success.

Unquestionably, education is in our heart and minds; it defines who we are at our core—a college deeply committed to others and the alignment of learning experiences to particular career goals. We celebrate teaching and learning through inclusive experiences that recognize the talents and excellence of all. So come home to Cambridge, where you can realize more than your dreams. You receive a deep commitment to lifelong learning, endless friendships, and a network of accomplished alumni who know what it is like to achieve the seemingly impossible.

At Cambridge, we helped write the book on adult education and we are doing it yet again by making intentional decisions focused exclusively on you and your individual career needs. Here, in the School of Education, we take lifelong learning seriously and consider this not just as a goal, but a promise.

Horoscope

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Don't let personal problems override your responsibilities. You have to carry your share of the work. Relationship complications will have to be dealt with after hours.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. You will face financial woes if you take a risk. Don't be shy about your desire to advance. You are likely to improve your job prospects by networking.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. There may be a lot of items on your most-wanted list, but you must be sensible. You can avoid a major argument with a loved one by curbing your spending.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. If your current relationship is unsatisfying, you should make a clean break and move on. It's not fair to either party if there is no commitment on your part.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Try your best to get along with your co-workers. You may be dismayed to learn that someone you like doesn't feel the same way. Don't take it to heart, and move on.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Don't spend money on others just to win approval. Focus on self-improvement projects that boost your esteem, and the people you are trying to impress will respond to your more assured attitude.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Anger is self-destructive, so use up negative energy by doing some work around the house. The busier you are, the less likely you are to squabble.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Look before you leap into a new job or partnership. You may have been sold something that doesn't really exist. Don't burn bridges, and don't be gullible. Ask questions and clarify issues of concern.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. You are caring and helpful, but please resist the urge to do too much for others. They will come to expect it, and you will burn yourself out.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Give your friends and family some breathing room. Make a point of getting out. Exploring new interests will bring good results.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. If you do your job to the best of your ability, you will be able to dispel any negative rumors in the workplace. It's possible that someone may be gossiping behind your back.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. In your race to beat the opposition, you may be letting your personal responsibilities slide. Before you start on a new challenge, take care of your home.

Downstream detriments

Re: 'Salmoning is safer for cyclists' (Metro, May 16-18) I couldn't agree more with letter writer Jack Dickenson. As a young child first learning to navigate the streets of a small suburban town on my bicycle, I was taught by my dad that you always ride your bicycle AGAINST the traffic! I want to see what's coming at me and if it's an out-of-control vehicle (for whatever reason). I want to be able to ditch the bike and dive for my life! You ride with the traffic and you're a sitting duck! As for the disorderly conduct charge against Baldwin — the cops created the "problem" and shouldn't have arrested him. He's a star; he's going to create a crowd no matter where he goes. Leave him alone, and go arrest some real criminals!

MICHELLE CALABRO, VIA EMAIL

IRS following the law

Re: 'Would Dems be OK with the IRS on their backs?' (Metro, May 16-18) Why do you keep publishing letters that have clear misstatements of fact? Letter writer Ron Shelton seems to think that the IRS only reviewed right-wing applications. Not true at all. Many progressives were also reviewed, but Rep. Issa ONLY complained about the Tea Party ones. Also, the progressives want clear and open rules, while the Republicans want special deals.

KEVIN DOWD, VIA EMAIL

In Friday's Metro, a letter to the editor says that the IRS targeted conservatives and wonders if Democrats would mind being targeted the next time a Republican is elected president. In fact, the IRS investigated more progressive groups than conservative groups! More to the point, the IRS investigated political groups of all stripes because THE LAW REQUIRES IT TO. I do not believe political groups should get to be nonprofits, but if you do, don't attack the IRS, change the law. PETER ADAMS, VIA EMAIL

WIN OR LOSE IN LOTTERY, CELTICS ARE IN GREAT SHAPE

Opinion

MATT BURKE
MATTHEW.BURKE@METRO.US

That little break from basketball wasn't that bad, was it?

On June 27, 2013, Celtics president of basketball operations Danny Ainge waived the white flag on the 2013-14 season when he traded away two of the franchise's greats in Paul Pierce and Kevin Garnett. But a mere 327 days after the blockbuster was first announced, the Celtics are once again the envy of the basketball world.

It may be strange to say, but no team outside of the Thunder — who should have Kevin Durant for the next 12 years or so — and maybe the Pelicans — who should have Anthony Davis for about the next 15 years — have brighter futures at this particular hour than the Boston Celtics.

The Celtics have a whopping nine potential first-round picks, including their own, to utilize over the next five years. For sure, some of those picks will be traded away for talent. In sum, the Celtics have more assets to work with in order to land a superstar or two or three in the next half decade than any other basketball organization. So, feel free to get excited.

The NBA draft lottery is Tuesday night at 8 p.m. on ESPN. This whole season we were under the impression that if the Celtics didn't get a top 3 pick that somehow this whole experiment was something of a failure. But on Sunday, the C's received some outstanding news. Kevin Love, the just-entering-his-prime power forward from the Minnesota Timberwolves, wants out of the Twin Cities. … like, now. If the Celtics have no luck in the lottery and stay at No. 5 or even slide to No. 8, all hope is not lost. Ainge can easily repeat history if he wants to. All he would have to do is trade a cache of picks and players to Minnesota and convince a potential Hall of Fame power forward named Kevin to come play basketball in Boston for the next several years. He could even needle the Celtics-hating Internet trolls by "taking advantage" of a Timberwolves executive with Green ties. Remember, current T'Wolves president Flip Saunders was a Celtics "advisor" in 2012 and Celtics haters — to this day — claim that then-Minny GM Kevin McHale is the main man to blame for the "inside job" that was the KG trade.

Truth be told, the most enjoyable path for Celtics success over the next 15 years would be to win this lottery thing outright Tuesday night and simply draft Andrew Wiggins or Jabari Parker or Joel Embiid. Building a championship team around one of these guys is a pretty solid plan going forward.

But plan 1A isn't too bad either. A Love-Rondo combo would make the Celtics instant contenders in the East and they could use their treasure trove of assets left over to still find a third wheel to accelerate the process.

Ainge has already taken the biggest and most difficult step forward in getting the Green back into championship contention as he has acquired the right chips. Now is the fun part. We get to sit back and see who, exactly, he's cashing those chips in for.

The brief basketball malaise in Boston will be officially over Tuesday night.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author.

NBA. League to hold hearing on potential ousting of Sterling

NBA owners will soon vote on whether or not to terminate Donald Sterling's ownership of the Los Angeles Clippers as the league has scheduled a hearing for June 3.

Sterling is charged with "damaging the league and its teams with his racist comments." Minnesota Timberwolves owner Glen Taylor will preside over the hearings, according to ESPN. Sterling has until May 27 to respond to the charges. METRO

Chrome will race at Belmont Stakes

The New York Racing Association stewards unanimously approved the use of nasal strips for horses at NYRA racetracks, which means California Chrome will race at the 146th Belmont in pursuit of becoming the first horse to win racing's Triple Crown since 1978.

California Chrome's trainer, Art Sherman, made a formal request to the stewards to allow the strips after threatening to pull California Chrome from the June 7 race. METRO

Celtics co-owner Steve Pagliuca will represent the Celtics at Tuesday's NBA Draft Lottery with good luck charms in tow.

Pagliuca will be wearing a leprechaun-speckled tie given to him by the late Red Auerbach and a handcrafted "Rooster of Barcelos" from the U.S. Ambassador to Portugal, according to ESPN.
